Foreword

Congratulations! You have made the move, welcome to Ghana.

At PwC we are committed to creating an inclusive workplace where everyone can succeed in achieving his or her personal and professional goals. An inclusive workplace enables us to embrace the diversity and richness of backgrounds and perspectives of our people, and to leverage their diverse talents to arrive at winning business solutions.

We can appreciate that moving to a new country such as Ghana can be quite daunting for people who have no idea about what the housing, transportation and social amenity conditions are. It is with this in mind, that we created The PwC Guide to Living in Ghana. The guide was put together using the personal experiences of PwC Ghana staff and also references source material from websites that cater to foreigners visiting Ghana. The PwC Guide to living in Ghana aims to provide guidance to visitors and expatriates moving to Ghana, dispel any myths and introduce readers to the many wonderful hidden gems that exist in the country.

Take a look inside this information filled guide developed to help you adjust to life in Ghana.

Once again on the behalf of all the Partners and staff of PwC Ghana we say Akwaaba (welcome)! We hope that you will find this guide useful.

Kind regards,

Ayesha Bedwei

PwC West Market Corporate Responsibility and Diversity and Inclusion Leader.

About Ghana

Ghana is located on the west coast of Africa. It is bounded on the north by Burkina Faso and on the west by La Cote D'Ivoire, on the east by Togo and on the south by the Gulf of Guinea (Atlantic Ocean). The capital of Ghana is Accra. Tema, the industrial city, which is adjunct to Accra, is on the Greenwich Meridian (zero line of longitude), making Ghana the closest landmark to the centre of the world.

Climate

Ghana has a tropical climate. The temperature is generally between 21-32c (70-90F). There are two rainy seasons, from March to July and from September to October, separated by a short cool dry season in August and a relatively long dry season in the south from mid-October to March. The north of Ghana, also with a tropical climate, is dry and falls partly within the Sahelian zone. Annual rainfall in the south of the country averages 2,030mm, but varies greatly throughout the country, with the heaviest rainfall in the south-western part of Ghana.

The People

There are 56 Ghanaian dialects, of which Akan, Dangbe, Ewe, Kasem, Gonja, Dagare, Ga, Dagbani and Nzema are the major languages. The official language of the country is English, but French and Hausa are two major foreign languages spoken in Ghana.

Ghana is a country very rich in culture. The "Culture, Customs and Etiquette" section of this guide provides detailed information.

Religion and Public Holidays

The 2010 Population Census indicates that Christianity, Islam and Traditional Religion are the major faiths practiced in Ghana.

Ghana's constitution guarantees freedom of religion. As such Ghana observes both Christian and Muslim public holidays.

Visit www.officeholidays.com/countries/ghana for a full list of all the public holiday dates for the year.

Local Cuisine

Food in Ghana is distinguished by the variety of regional and tribal cultures throughout the country. Many of Ghana's most popular foods are traditional dishes which reflect the country's long history and agriculture.

In general, dishes share a common mix of staple carbohydrates such as rice, millet and maize, and are served with seasoned stews and sauces.

Despite the starchy staples, food is rarely bland in Ghana. Many dishes are spicy. Ghanaians love using spices such as cinnamon and hot red peppers. (Chilies and red peppers are the fifth most important agricultural product for Ghana's farmers in terms of revenue.)

Local Ghanaian Cuisine include the following:

- Banku (fermented corn and cassava dough) and Tilapia
- Kenkey (fermented corn dough)
- Fufu (Pounded Cassava)
- Omo-tuo (Mashed rice rolled into balls)
- Jollof Rice (Rice cooked with tomatoes, spices, and sometimes meat boiled together)
- Waakye (Rice and beans)

Health Care, Hospitals and Clinics

Prior to visiting Ghana it is highly recommended that visitors receive the following immunisations:

- Yellow Fever
- Typhoid
- Malaria
- Hepatitis A and B
- Meningitis
- Polio

It is important to take extra care when eating and drinking in Ghana. Unclean food and drink can cause travellers and new residents in Ghana to become very unwell. The risk of falling ill can be reduced by sticking to safe food and water habits.

Make sure to only eat:

- Food that is cooked and served hot
- Eggs that are hard boiled
- Fruits and vegetables that have been washed in clean water and have been peeled by yourself
- Pasteurised dairy products

Make sure to only drink:

- Bottle water that is sealed
- Water that has been disinfected
- Ice made with bottled water or disinfected water
- Carbonated drinks
- Hot coffee or tea
- Pasteurised milk

Avoid eating and drinking:

- Food served at room temperature
- Food that is sold by the road side over gutters (street vendors)
- Raw and uncooked eggs (runny)
- Undercooked and rare meat and fish
- Bush meat (wild animals, bats)
- Tap or well water (including ice made from tap or well water)
- Drinks made with tap or well water
- Unpasteurised milk

Malaria

Malaria is a tropical disease spread by mosquitoes that if not treated properly, can prove to be fatal.

Malaria precautions are essential in all areas, all year round. Mosquito bites can be avoided by covering up with clothing such as long sleeves and long trousers especially after sunset, using insect repellents on exposed skin and, when necessary, sleeping under a mosquito net.

Health and Hospitals

The health and wellbeing of our staff is of utmost importance to us. Prior to joining the firm, staff are required to take pre-employment medical examinations to ensure good health.

Culture, Customs and Etiquette

The Ghanaian culture places much emphasis on hospitality, formality and good manners. While it is not expected for non-Ghanaians to be familiar with culture and traditions, there are a few things that if known will make integrating into society a lot easier:

- When addressing people (especially elders) it is appropriate to use titles such as Sir, Madam, Mr, Mrs, Professor, Doctor. Referring to people by their title is an important part of showing respect in Ghana.
- In Ghana it is customary and obligatory to shake hands when meeting. The “Ghanaian Handshake” differs from the handshakes found in the western world. It involves the middle finger snapping the middle finger of the person whose hand you are shaking. The louder the snap, the better! It takes some getting used to but you will find that a Ghanaian will be more than happy to wait while you attempt the handshake a second or third time.
- In the Ghanaian culture, your left hand is considered your ‘toilet hand’ however it is permitted to eat with your left hand. Always use your right hand to give and receive items, and to eat. It is common practice to give money with your right hand while at the same time receiving your purchase with the same hand. While Ghanaians do not expect foreigners to be familiar with this protocol, it is advisable to keep this in the back of your mind and adopt this practice especially when in a public place or professional setting.
- Always greet people first when you enter an area. Greetings should be given in the correct order, right-to-left, regardless of age or gender.
- Having a respectful manner is a must, especially when interacting with elders. The older the person, the more respect should be given.
- Ghanaians believe in sharing. When sitting down for a meal it is common practice for a person to invite friends, family members and colleagues to share in their food by saying ‘You’re invited’. Sharing food and sharing stories are two of the best ways to join this culture of interdependence. Africa is a land where every little thing has value and therefore people try their utmost to not be wasteful. Feel free to offer anything that has no value to you to the less fortunate.
- Ghana is tolerant and respectful of all its diverse tribes, religions and customs therefore it is not advisable to make derogatory remarks about any religious, political or ethnic group or behavior
- Direct, “let’s get to business” conversation is considered rude. Always exchange pleasantries and enquire about family before beginning to transact any business.
- A person’s demeanour and dressing should be appropriate at all times. Men should opt for lightweight trousers when not at work at these are preferred over shorts. Shirts with a collar are also the preferred dress during the weekday.

Men should not go shirtless except at the beach or poolside. Shorts and T-shirts are fine after the workday hours or on weekends casually. Women should dress in ways that do not compromise their modesty.

- Fridays which are traditionally known as ‘dress down days’ in the western culture have a different meaning here in Ghana. On Friday you will see many people in their ‘Friday wear’, which is African print material used for business attire.

It is important for visitors to understand that starting times for events in Ghana are often not exact. It’s not uncommon for people to turn up to meetings and events later than scheduled. Visitors should not take it personally if people turn up late to an event that they have organised.

Tippling

Do be prepared to leave a tip when receiving a service in Ghana. It is not protocol, but generally a tip is expected and always appreciated. For example, if hotel staff are really friendly and helpful, your service at a restaurant was exceptionally good, the stylist at the hair salon performed with precision, the taxi driver was honest and efficient.

It is also customary to leave a tip for workers such as cleaners at hotels, and when someone goes out of their way to help you, for example, when a car park attendant keeps a watchful eye on your car. Do not be overly generous, but do leave enough to show appreciation for the services you receive.

Requests for money (Beggars)

Many foreigners (and locals) are approached by people begging for money. A simple stop in the car at traffic lights can bring a plethora of beggars or people selling items. This is something that is unavoidable.

When handling requests for money, giving away two Ghana Cedis is usually enough. It is not feasible to give money to everyone who asks, simply refuse as generously as you can if you cannot (or do not want to) give out money.

Places of Worship

As mentioned in the “About Ghana” section of this guide, Christianity, Islam and Traditional Religion are the major faiths practiced in Ghana..

For a list of different places of worship in Ghana visit www.noworriesghana/sections/worship.

Currency, Exchanging Money and Banking in Ghana

Currency

The Ghana Cedi is the currency of Ghana. The currency code for the Cedi is GHS and the currency symbol is GH¢.

Ghana Cedi notes include ¢50.00, ¢20.00, ¢10.00, ¢5.00, and ¢1.00 notes along with ¢0.10, ¢0.05, ¢0.10, ¢0.20, ¢0.50, and ¢100 pesewa coins.

Exchanging Money

The best places to exchange money in Ghana are foreign exchange bureaus (Forex Bureaus) which are easily found in the major cities. There are numerous forex bureaus in Accra however the further you travel out of the capital, the less likely you will be able to find them.

It is also common to exchange money at banks. Previously bank rates were not favourable as those found at forex bureaus, however this has changed in recent years. Exchanging money at the airport and in most major hotels is also possible. Travellers who decide to change money at the airport should compare the rate in the city first as it is usually better.

Although the black market is illegal in Ghana, black market currency exchange on the street is common. It is not advised to exchange cash with an individual on the street. Excellent exchange rates are offered on the black market, however there is a high probability that the money could be counterfeit.

The US dollar is the most common form of foreign currency in Ghana, the Pound Sterling is very strong and the Euro is also widely recognised. For those exchanging the US dollar, new bills without rips or tears are preferred and helps to avoid any discrepancies with Ghanaian locals about the validity of your money.

The bigger the bill you present the better the exchange rate. Always make a point to count the amount of money you receive before leaving the place of exchange in order to ensure you have received the correct amount. Also make sure that the money is in good condition, as banknotes in poor condition (torn or dirty) may not be accepted as a form of payment in supermarkets, shops or other small businesses.

Foreign currency can be freely exchanged at any forex bureau in the country with a maximum of $10,000 or its equivalent per transaction.

Travellers cheques are not always accepted at forex bureaus.

Banking in Ghana

To ensure easy access to cash at all times, it is advisable to exchange money and set up a bank account upon arrival in Ghana.

Most banks in Ghana offer services, to both citizens and foreigners, for current/checking and savings accounts, letters of credit and loans. There are quite a few international banks such as Barclays Bank and Standard Chartered Bank, as well as commercial banks operating in Ghana.

It is fairly easy to open a bank account in Ghana. Processes are usually quite straightforward however requirements differ per banking institution. The process usually only consists of filling out a form and submitting the appropriate documentation. In most cases, to open a personal account, the only documentation required is a form of identification, such as a passport. Although, sometimes more documentation will be requested, such as a second form of identification, proof of residence, a letter of introduction from the customer's home country, a reference letter from an account-holder of the bank to which is being applied in Ghana and/or a letter of reference from your employer.

Language and Hours of Business

All banks conduct business in English. Commercial banks in Ghana operate on a Monday through Friday schedule, and usually open at 8:30 am and close around 4:30 to 5 pm, with the exception of some banks that close earlier Fridays. Certain banks also open on Saturday until around midday.

Internet banking

Most banks in Ghana provide services such as internet and telephone banking. Internet banking, in particular, has become increasingly popular, as banks feel they must offer this service to satisfy their customers, compete with other banks and contribute to the infrastructure of the internet.

ATMs and Credit Cards

ATMs are widely available in Ghana. The Visa card is the most commonly accepted. Visa debit cards can be used at ATMs with ease. Maximum withdrawal amounts vary by bank.

Withdrawing money from foreign accounts via ATM in Ghana usually results in favourable exchange rates.

Visa credit cards are commonly used, making it easy to withdraw local currency at any ATM. All major banks have an ATM that is compatible with Visa. It is quite difficult to find ATMs in Ghana that accept credit cards other than Visa.

Places to Live and Electricity

In Accra, Airport Residential, Cantonments, Osu, Labone, Roman Ridge and East Legon are the areas in which many expatriates prefer to live.

Landlords usually require 1-2 years rent payment upfront which can make renting in Ghana extremely expensive.

Valuables

It is imperative to make photocopies of valuables such as passports, tickets, visas and travellers cheques. A safe option is to keep one copy in a separate place to the original and to leave the original document at home. Scanned computerised copies should be loaded on to computers and web based email accounts so that they can be easily retrievable from any connected computer should copies need to be made. A lost or stolen passport will be re-issued faster if you present a copy along with the police report.

Electricity and Power Supply

Voltage

Ghana uses 220V power. Foreign electrical appliances such as blow dryers, electric shavers, laptops or other electrical appliances, require a “step down” transformer in order for them to be used. Appliances that have a 110/220 switch, will work fine, however a small plug-in adapter that will accept the different plug type is needed. A “step-down” transformer can be purchased locally in many supermarkets.

The power grid in Ghana is unreliable. Voltage surges can cause home equipment such as refrigerators, televisions and washing machines to malfunction. A surge protector is therefore a necessity to prevent any damages. A solution that can solve two problems at once – power surges and plug issues – is to buy an extension cord that accepts different types of plugs and includes voltage surge protection.

Mobile Phone, Internet Service Providers and Satellite Television

There are a number of local and international telecommunication companies operating in Ghana. These include:

- Vodafone
- MTN
- Tigo
- Airtel

Prepaid and postpaid options are available for mobile phones. Some operators also offer international packages for foreigners to phone abroad.

Prepaid option

The prepaid option generally requires you to buy a mobile phone and sim card for an affordable price, and to top-up the air-time when you need to. This appears to be the cheapest option, however, it includes an obligation to top-up regularly, in order for your number to remain active. This validity period is normally 90 days.

Not all services are free of charge, charges vary by service provider. It is advisable to know and understand which services are free or not.

A cheaper option may be to buy a low cost mobile phone and sim package. This phone will have limited costly services available, and saves you from using the mobile from your previous country. You can purchase a cheap mobile phone in any phone store, where you will be asked to provide details such as identity, nationality and age.

Postpaid option

Mobile phone contracts can be signed at one of the operator's retail stores, or even on the internet. The phone can be obtained at the same time as the contract is signed. As an expatriate, extra documents may be required, such as:

- A residence visa/permit
- Proof of your identity
- Proof of billing address
- A bank statement

The monthly fee for a postpaid contract depends on your consumption.

International packages

Some providers offer a special contract to include international phone calls. This may really appeal to expatriates, as Tigo and Vodafone, for example, offer international roaming, that you can subscribe to by calling a particular number.

Internet Service Providers

Internet penetration has grown swiftly in Ghana over the past few years. There are more than 15 internet service providers in Ghana offering high speed internet connectivity. The most commonly used are:

- Vodafone (www.vodafone.com.gh)
- Surfline (www.surflinegh.com)
- MTN (www.mtn.com.gh)
- Teledata ICT (www.teledataict.com)
- Airtel (www.africa.airtel.com/ghana)
- Busy (www.busy.com.gh)

Satellite Television – MultiChoice Ghana

MultiChoice Africa is a multi-channel pay television platform provider. It provides premium television entertainment to over one million digital subscribers in 47 countries on the African continent and adjacent Indian Ocean islands through its DStv Bouquets.

DStv gives subscribers extensive choice of entertainment, combining general entertainment, movies, documentaries, news, children's programming, music, religion and sports.

There are a few viewing bouquet options that allow subscribers the flexibility of price and choice.

Subscribers can make enquiries online at www.dstv.com/en-gh or visit any Multichoice Ghana located in Accra as well as in Kumasi and Takoradi. There are also a total of 150 dealers all across the country to help customers whenever they are in need.

Travel in Ghana (International Driving Permits and Transport)

Road Travel in Ghana

Many people opt to drive as the transport system is not advanced in Ghana as in other parts of the world.

You will often find that office staff who live in the same areas often ride together in personal cars or taxis. Travel within Ghana can be quite the experience! Roads in cities are generally good and paved, however those outside of towns can be quite bad and often possess potholes which make driving conditions difficult and time consuming.

Traffic in Ghana (especially in a city like Accra) can be busy and often quite chaotic. Drivers unfamiliar with driving in Ghana will quickly realise the road traffic rules and regulations are different compared to what they may be used to in their home countries.

International Driving Permits

An International Drivers Permit allows drivers from other countries to drive in Ghana. Drivers can also apply for a. Before applying for a local driving licence, licences from expatriate home countries must be authenticated by the country's driving, vehicle and licence authority. Driving licences or international driving permits must be carried at all times when driving. (See Police Checks section)

Tro-Tros

Tro-tros are mini buses which are used as public transport to pick up passengers and take them to various parts of town and country. Travellers wanting to budget their travel usually use these vehicles. While many people use tro-tros on a daily basis to go to and from work and social activities, they can, at times be unsafe and often have low safety standards.

Taxis

Taxis are the most commonly used method of public transport. Taxi cars can be identified by the 'taxi' sign and cars having orange/yellow corners. Taxi fares should be negotiated prior to commencement of journeys to avoid arguing about fares once you reach your destination. Passing taxis that you flag on the street are referred to as "dropping" taxis, and they will take you directly to your destination. There are also dropping taxis that wait for passengers at various locations, but taking a parked dropping taxi is always more expensive than flagging a taxi that is driving by.

Shared Taxis

As the name indicates these are taxis that take between 4-5 passengers at a time. These taxis often wait at a particular place (or station) until the car is full with passengers before starting the journey. Fares for these taxis are usually fixed due to fares being shared amongst passengers. If a passenger is in hurry and does not want to wait for the car to be full an option to pay extra to convert the car into a dropping taxi is often available.

Buses

Buses provide the best balance of safety, expense, speed and comfort, especially when travelling between major towns. Many have air conditioning and video facilities, but not all.

Buses will charge an extra fee for luggage. You may get off the bus at any point along the way, but the full fare for the bus's destination will be required.

State Transport Company (STC) has a scheduled bus service that runs along nearly all paved roads in Ghana. Tickets are booked in advance, so buy your tickets early rather than going to the bus station expecting to be on the next departing bus. The air conditioned buses are more comfortable and therefore the tickets sell out faster - sometimes days in advance.

VIP also operates nice buses along major routes. They have a newer fleet, more flexible schedules, and, like tro-tros, will depart for their destination once the bus is full.

Metro Mass is the other main carrier between cities, and they run on much more flexible schedules. These operate along major roads, but also along routes not serviced by other bus companies. These buses are slower and less expensive, but usually provide the same level of safety and comfort as STC.

Due to buses running full from their point of departure, it is very difficult to find a seat on a passing bus unless it is far from its original point of departure. STC and VIP will only pick passengers from stations, while Metro Mass will pick passengers anywhere along the route, if seats are available. This is why they are slower.

Hiring a private car and a driver

Many foreigners and tourists prefer renting a car with a driver to explore Ghana as opposed to driving themselves. Rental prices in Ghana can be quite expensive and are often comparable to prices found in Europe or the United States.

There are number of car rental companies in Ghana that offer chauffeur driven services which can save the worry of driving in a foreign country. A private car with a driver allows easy exploring of villages, isolated beaches and other sights.

The cost of renting a car depends on the car rental company. Visit www.ghana.rentalcargroup.com for information on prices and cars available for rental.

Police Check Points

While Ghana is one of the safest countries to live in Africa, extra caution should be taken while travelling late at night.

To ensure safety at night for travellers and residents, there are a number of check points on the road guarded by police officers during the night. Checkpoints usually start from 9pm until the very early hours of the morning. When driving or travelling in a car that stops at a police check point, do not be alarmed if a police officer asks questions such as your destination, and the point at which you started your journey. It is also common practice for police officers to ask to see a driver's driving licence, search cars with torch lights and check cars registration and insurance stickers which should be clearly displayed on car windscreens.

International and Domestic Air Travel and Visas

The variety of international flights to and from Accra offered by numerous international airlines makes Ghana one of the best connected countries in Africa.

There are 8 airports in Ghana:

- Kotoka International Airport
- Kumasi Airport
- Navrongo Airport

Shopping Malls and Supermarkets

Shopping Malls

Shopping malls have been sweeping many countries in the continent and Ghana is no exception. The country is home to the largest shopping mall in West Africa (West Hills Mall). Many retailers have found Ghana to be an attractive location. Big names such as Woolworths, Edgars, Game and international fashion giant Mango can be found in the malls of Ghana.

Supermarkets

Imported goods and food items can be bought at certain supermarkets across Ghana, however due to importation costs and currency fluctuations these items are usually sold at sometimes two to three times price than back in countries such as UK and the US. It is advised to take this into consideration when budgeting monthly outgoings.

Cinemas

Many first time visitors to Ghana wonder how they will keep up with the latest blockbusting movie releases once they move to the country. Luckily Ghana has cinemas that show the latest film releases. Films screened include Hollywood, Bollywood (Indian), Nollywood (Nigerian) and local Ghanaian films of high quality and production. Cinemas usually offer week day promotions where viewers can get free refreshments and snacks when purchasing cinema tickets. Mobile phone providers sometimes offer great deals for their customers at cinemas across the country.

Bargaining Tactics when shopping

With the exception of goods in supermarkets, high-end shops, hotels and restaurants, nothing in Ghana has a set price, shoppers set the prices they are willing to pay by doing some friendly bargaining with the vendor.

In general, when markets are in trade, sellers will initially offer an item at 50 to 70 % more than what they expect for the item. The buyer's counteroffer should be very low, around 50% less than what they are willing to pay. The buyer and the seller will go back and forth until an agreement is made. If a buyer cannot make a deal, they should simply move on. Sometimes walking away proves to the seller that the buyer is set on what they are willing to pay, and they usually settle on the end price that the buyer has determined.

Keep in mind that the vendor is familiar with the economics of this type of business, and they will never sell anything that puts them at a loss.

Charitable donations

Many foreigners and tourists like to give their unwanted clothes and other belongings to some of the less fortunate people they encounter in Ghana. Many locals in towns and villages are appreciative of this gesture.

Clothing with logos (T-shirts, caps, etc.) are especially interesting to both the young and old.

Markets

Markets in Ghana sell an array of items to match all tastes. From locally made crafts and jewellery, to imported pots and pans, clothes and footwear from across the world there is not much that you won't find at the market. Ghanaian markets are colourful to say the least, and many shoppers are often pleasantly surprised at the bargains they leave with after a day of shopping.

Makola Market, situated in the heart of Accra is one of the more well-known markets in Ghana. Prices are negotiable so therefore it's recommended that shoppers sharpen their bartering skills before their visits.

Another famous market in Ghana, is Kejetia market in Kumasi. Similar to Makola, shoppers who are fond of a bargain have a great time shopping there.

Shoppers should always remain vigilant when visiting markets and ensure that all valuables such as mobile phones, purses and wallets are kept firmly out of sight. As much as the market traders and fellow shoppers can be friendly, there are also opportunists who prey on unsuspecting foreigners and tourists.

Cultural Art Centre

The Cultural Art Centre located in Accra, showcases traditional handicrafts from all over Ghana. The centre also boasts arts and crafts bazaars and a traditional textile market with souvenirs that have been crafted in clay, wood, leather and metal.

Hotels

Ghana is a tourist destination all year round. In the past few years many new hotels have been built, and older hotels refurbished resulting in tourists being spoiled for choice when choosing a luxurious hotel to stay in while visiting the country.
